The body of the unknown soldier arrived here last night after it had been honored by Marshal Foch and other military officials in France from the time it was exhumed until the escort of French destroyers turned for home after seeing the English destroyer Verdun, which bore the body safely into the harbor of Dover. It was brought to London in the same railway car used to transport the bodies of Edith Cavelle, the nurse who was executed by the Germans, and Capt. Charles Fryatt. the British captain of a British mer-chant steamer who also met death before a German firing squad. It lay last night in a room especially set apart and fitted for it in Victoria station, and a guard of honor re-mained there until morning. The immediate guard which escort-crowded and silent streets from the station to Whitehall was composed of 100 men of all services who won the Victoria Cross.

The pallbearers were field mar-shals and admirals of the fleet, in-cluding Viscount Douglas Haig, Earl cluding Viscount Douglas Haig, Earl Beatty, admiral of the grand fleet, and Maj.-Gen. Sir Hugh Trenchard, commander of the British air forces.
